Why Bitcoin

Bitcoin is new way to store and transact value. Unlike normal financial networks, Bitcoin is able to operate without central authorities or trusted administrators. That makes Bitcoin the first ever open and borderless currency.

Bitcoin can be sent anywhere in the world, quickly and cheaply. It has no need for a 3rd party transmitter, like a bank. A true social revolution enabled by technology.

Isn't Bitcoin's price too volatile?

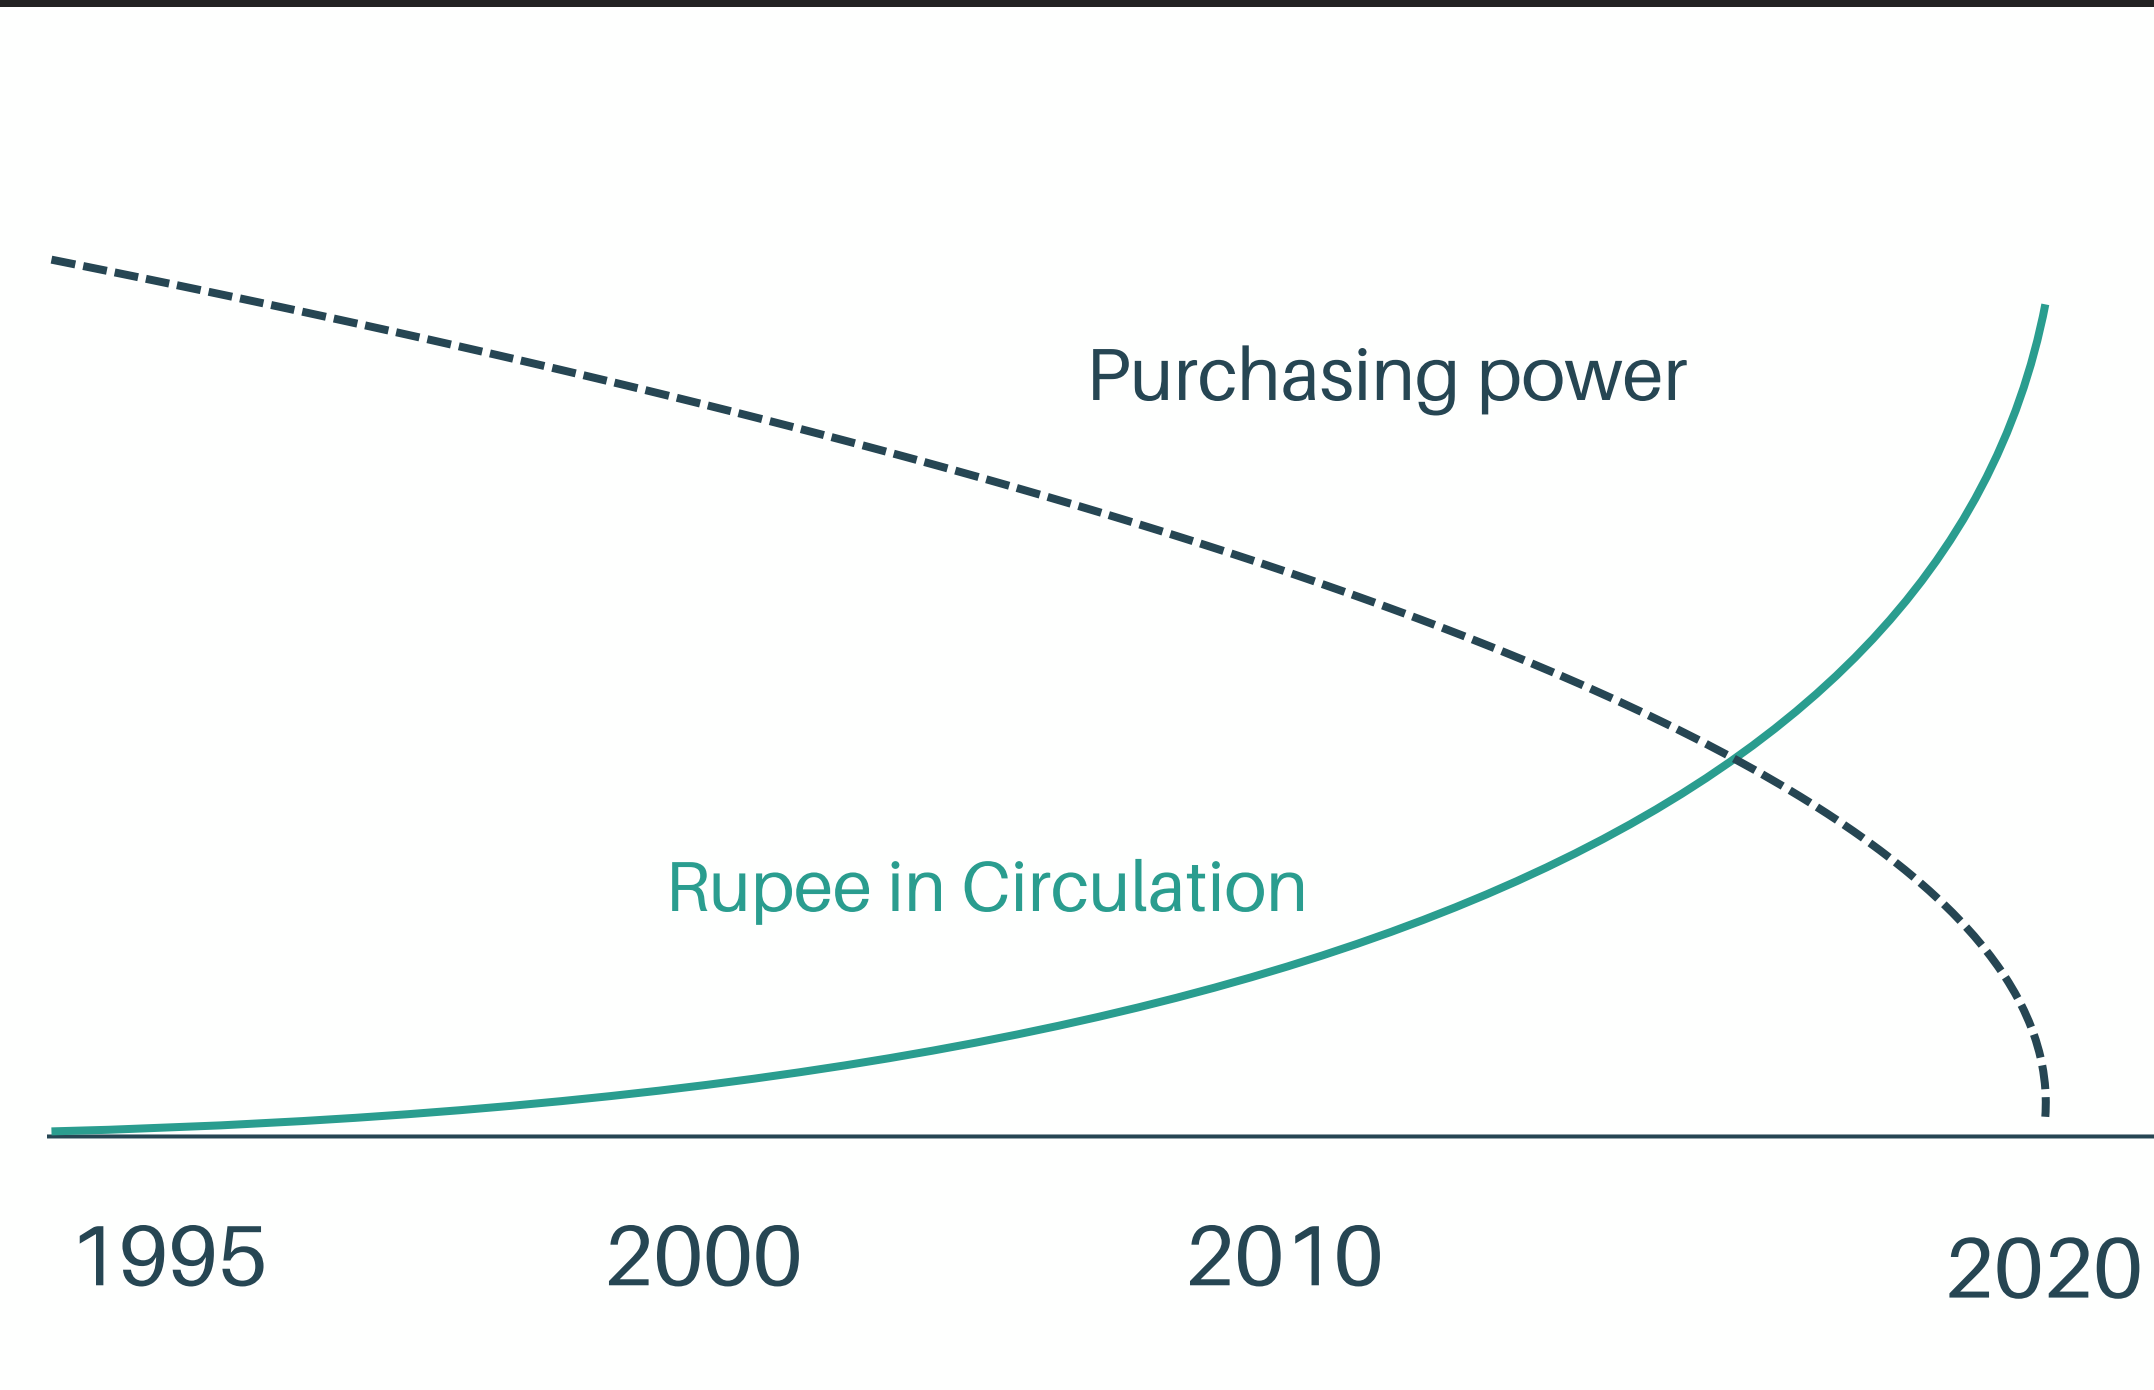

In the short term, Bitcoin's value can fluctuate, but over time these daily swings even out. As adoption grows, its volatility decreases and its value becomes more stable."

Bitcoin is scarce

The scarcity defined by the algorithm is what gives Bitcoin value and makes it a good currency. The more users, the more purchasing power, as the amount of Bitcoin in circulation is limited. There can only ever be 21 million Bitcoin. And because bitcoin's code is open-source, anyone can choose to verify it for themselves.
